LIGHTING THE WAY

THE route for the Olympic Torch Relay in Hackney has been announced.

The flame, to be carried by 21 inspirational residents, will enter the borough at Shoreditch High Street on 21 July and travel north along the A10 to Clissold Park in Stoke Newington. Along its route it will be welcomed by the One Hackney Festival 2012. Torchbearers will then run the flame eastwards through Homerton in 300-metre legs until it passes into Waltham Forest for the evening.

The torch (inset), by Hackney-based designers Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby, is set to travel through 1,018 villages, towns and cities along its route, during its 70-day journey. Some 115 torchbearers a day will carry the flame during its 8,000-mile voyage before it arrives at the Olympic Stadium on 27 July.

Sebastian Coe, chair of LOCOG, said: "Today we bring the Olympic Torch Relay to life. The flame symbolises the Olympic spirit and its journey around the UK will bring the excitement of the Games to our streets."

Swimming coach Vicki Carter, one of the residents chosen to carry the flame along a section of its journey, said: "I am very excited to be running in the torch relay. It's an honour to have been selected – I have always loved the Olympics and I really hope the children I teach at King's Hall are inspired by seeing the swimming."

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, added: "Hackney is ready for a day of celebration and entertainment that will make the very most of the procession of the Olympic torch through the borough. We want residents to come out in force along the route to cheer torchbearers as the flame gets closer towards the Olympic Stadium." See page 3 for more.

Computer-generated images (CGIs) of how the outdoor VeloPark at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park will look after redevelopment

A WORLD-class outdoor cycling facility and a new green space in Hackney are to be created at the Olympic Park after plans were given the go-head this month.

A one mile road cycle circuit and approximately 8km of mountain bike trails around the existing velodrome will be built to create the world-class Lee Valley VeloPark.

The borough's green space will sit to the south of the circuit and the west of River Lea. Plans for the Hackney park were created after the Olympic Park Legacy Company (OPLC) revised an earlier planning application to realign the circuit to create the community space and provide better access to riverbanks. A visitor centre and large-scale playground is also planned.

The road cycle circuit will cross the River Lea twice and will be surrounded by wetlands, park spaces and towpaths for walkers and cyclists in the south.

The latest designs were agreed by the Council, British Cycling, Sport England and Lee Valley Regional Park Authority – which will own and operate the VeloPark after the Games. Community groups including Eastway Cyclists were also consulted.

Andrew Altman, chief executive of the OPLC, believes it will be a positive addition to the Olympic Park. He said: "By working closely with our partners we have planned an even better legacy that will not only benefit cyclists, but also thousands of people from across East London who will be connected through a new park space."

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, added: "We are pleased that a plan has been approved that will deliver a world-class VeloPark and also fulfil the commitment to create high quality, coherent parkland for use by all of the communities of Hackney and the Olympic host boroughs.

"The scheme will allow Hackney residents continuous access to the banks of the River Lea for the first time, connect the Olympic Park to Hackney Marshes and provide exciting green spaces for our communities to come together and enjoy."

The OPLC, which is responsible for the development of the Olympic Park after London 2012, aims to complete the VeloPark by the end of 2013.

> "We have planned an even better legacy that will... benefit thousands of people across East London"

One Hackney Festival 2012 will welcome the Olympic Torch Relay route on 21 July

WHEN the Olympic Torch Relay passes through Hackney, it will be welcomed by the One Hackney Festival 2012 – a borough-wide celebratory event to welcome the flame.

Full details of the festival are still to be announced but the day will include a musical street parade around the torch route and will culminate with an event at Clissold Park.

Accompanying the parade will be a festival fringe that brings the celebrations to Hackney's town centres with food, entertainment, performances and music.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said of the day: "It will be an opportunity to share in the excitement of the final build up to the Games whilst enjoying the carnival atmosphere of the One Hackney Festival 2012."

News in brief

Two weeks left for residents to apply for 2012 Games jobs

THERE is less than two weeks left before most businesses close their recruitment process for the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Nearly 1,000 residents have now been offered jobs on or near the Olympic Park for London 2012 so far.

Father-of-three Victor Noel, 28, was offered a job with caterer Bon Appetit through Hackney recruitment centre On Site. On Site is providing advice on how to apply for the many roles on offer during the Games. Victor said: "With the 2012 Games I felt it was a massive opportunity for me. On Site got me an interview and a job with Bincho's restaurant with an immediate start."

Springboard in Lower Clapton is also offering support to residents so they can apply on the spot. One-to-one sessions can be booked with an advisor every Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Additionally, Job Centre Plus recently hosted a recruitment session, and the catering company Aramark reports that it has seen more candidates from Hackney than any other host borough.

For On Site, call: 020 7275 7843. To book a session with Springboard, call: 020 8356 5700. To apply direct, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/2012-jobs-recruiting-now

Residents have two weeks left to apply for a Games job

Let's hear it first in Hackney

A SMARTPHONE application that gives a museum-style audio tour of London Fields is now available.

Hackney Hear is a free download that provides a multimedia guide of the E8 park and Broadway Market. Using GPS, it streams interviews, stories and music about the area triggered by the location of the phone.

Residents as well as borough artists – including Tom Hunter – were interviewed for the audio descriptions. Their stories and secrets range from the history of the green space to first kisses.

A trial began last year, with the application fully launched on 8 March.

Founder Francesca Panetta said: "Hackney has the highest concentration of artists in the world and Hackney Hear is both a celebration and a reflection of that rich cultural backdrop in a year when the Olympic borough will receive global attention."

Organisers hope to expand the areas that it covers.

Book yourself into the library

A GALA week of events celebrating the opening of the Dalston CLR James Library closed with a noisy bang at a family fun day on 3 March.

Over 200 people came to the event at the Dalston Lane library. Author and storyteller Sandra Agard entertained the crowds with her tales and Horrid Henry made an appearance to sign autographs and have his photo taken with his new young friends.

Other highlights from the 'Make a noise for libraries' opening week of events included music, poetry and reminiscence for older people; 'desert island books' with guest authors; and a celebration of CLR James's life.

Memories came flooding back at the reminiscence event on 27 February with a morning of music and poetry. Older people looked at pictures from Hackney's vast online archives and chatted about the borough of old. The event was run by Hackney Archives and the Council's Community Library Service, which delivers books to the elderly and disabled in their homes.

Phyllis Hall, who receives the home visit service, said: "Libraries are a lifeline that I couldn't do without."

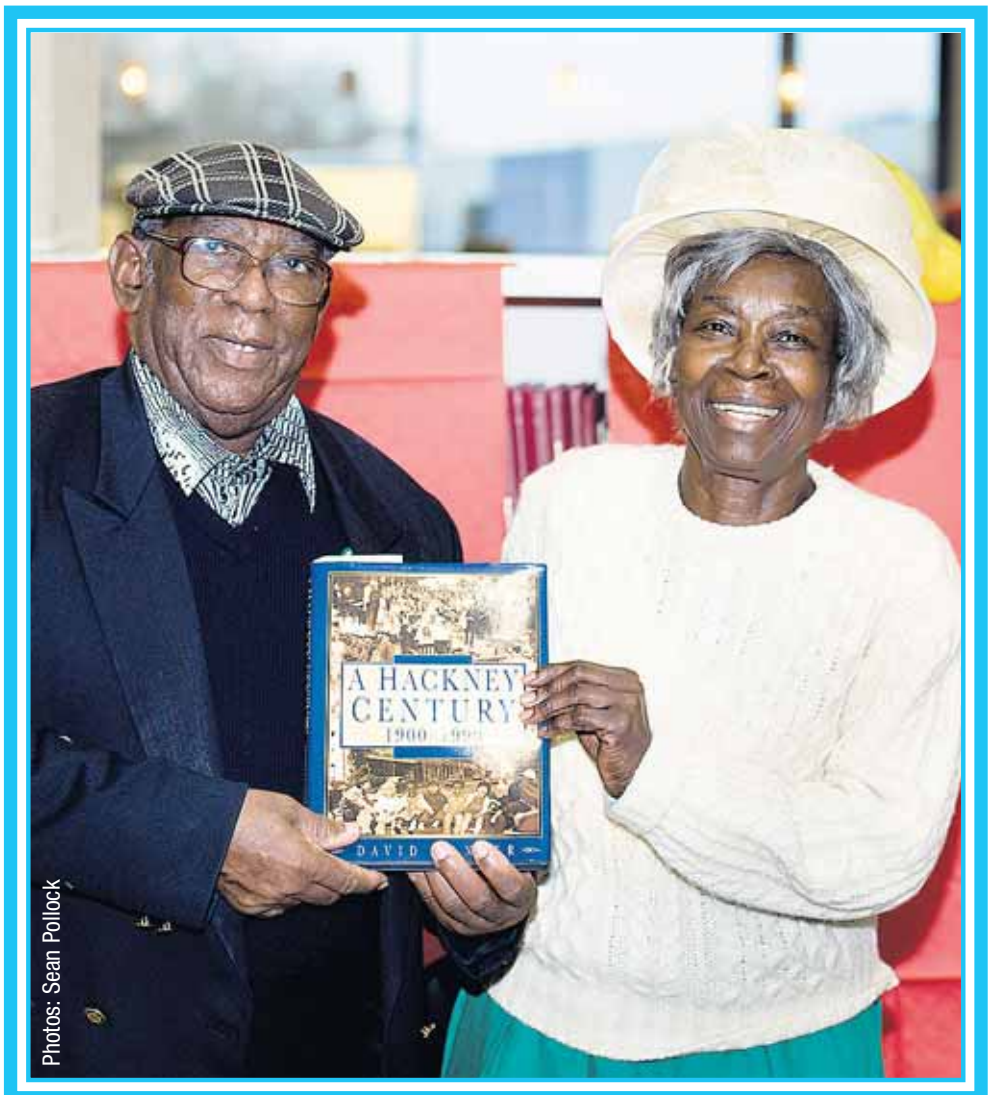

At the desert island books event, which tied in with World Book Day on 1 March, guest authors Mark Billingham, Richard Newton, Richard T Kelly and Maggie Hamand shared their thoughts with the audience on what books they would take should they be exiled to a desert island.

The library also celebrated its namesake on 3 March with a launch of a permanent exhibition dedicated to the life and legacy of Cyril Lionel Robert James, attended by his widow Selma James and representatives of Black and Minority Arts Network.

Selma said: "When I came round the corner and saw the name CLR James on the new library building I was lost for words – CLR would have loved it too."

A new Council initiative hopes to encourage road safety awareness by getting cyclists to see life from a lorry driver's perspective

Trading places

A MOVING HGV lorry can be both a terrifying and dangerous obstacle for many cyclists when negotiating high streets and back roads.

Now a new Council initiative hopes to encourage road safety awareness by getting cyclists to see life from a lorry driver's perspective.

Cyclists using the busy A10 route between Shoreditch and Stamford Hill were invited to sit in the cab of a parked HGV at a road safety event on 7 March, and were sent away with a free rucksack and a copy of the Highway Code.

> "We all have a responsibility to share road space and consider other users' safety"

More than 40 cyclists were also stopped for jumping a red light, but instead of the usual £30 fine, they were given the opportunity to take up a two-hour cycle training session from Hackney police officers and the Council's road safety team.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "I was delighted to see so many people taking time out of their journeys to participate. We all have a responsibility to share road space and consider other users' safety.

"Our other initiative of getting drivers on to bikes so they can see the cyclist's point of view has been very successful. Having completed the training with our own fleet of drivers, as well as those from Hackney Homes and The Learning Trust, we now have courses booked with outside companies that work and travel through Hackney."

Sgt Mark Jagger added: "Yet again, this event was an overwhelming success and the feedback has been extremely positive. Even the most cynical of attendees expressed shock at how little an HGV driver is able to see from the seat of their vehicle.

"Everyone who attended the event learned from the experience, and as a result avoided a £30 fine. They will hopefully have more confidence to ride safely in the future."

"I strongly believe that this event has gone a small way to making the borough's transient cycling population somewhat safer," he added.

The event took place at Kingsland Fire Station, E2, to launch the Council's 'Watch Out for Me!' campaign. It aims to improve safety for all road users in Hackney.

Road users will also be encouraged to share the streets safely and consider other vulnerable users throughout March, April and May with the 'Watch Out for Me!' banners on 160 lamppost sites throughout the borough.

Hackney CAB opens new office

HACKNEY Citizens' Advice Bureau (CAB) has opened its new office on Mare Street.

It continues to work with the Council, statutory and private sectors, housing associations and voluntary organisations to provide free, independent and confidential information.

Speaking at the opening last month, Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "For decades Hackney's CAB has been working hard on behalf of the people of Hackney; including some of our most vulnerable residents. I hope the team and residents enjoy these new offices."

Hackney CAB advises on debt, welfare benefits, immigration, employment, housing, consumer issues, and education. Located at 300 Mare Street, E8, it is open Mon to Thurs, 8.30am-5pm; and Fri, 9.30am-5pm. For more, call: 020 8525 6350.

Digital TV switchover looms

LONDON is set to complete the digital television switchover over next month.

All analogue channels will be turned off in April to boost the power of Freeview channels.

The switchover will work in two stages: on 4 April analogue BBC Two will turn off; followed by all remaining analogue services on 18 April. Viewers with digital TVs, Top Up TV or digital boxes will need to retune their equipment at both stages.

Digital TV uses less broadcast space which means that after switchover, there will be more room for new services such as wireless broadband, local and High Definition TV services.

Police recover bike parts

BOROUGH police are releasing photos of bike parts recovered in Hackney in the hope of finding their owners.

Officers found a number of stolen bike parts, including handlebars, saddles and seat posts at an address in the borough. Many of the parts are distinctive and could be returned to original owners.

Police Sergeant Ian Turner, from Hackney police, said: "This may seem an unusual appeal but this is a crime that can affect many people. We have already traced the owners of some items, enabling us to restore to them their property."

Police seize bike parts

Bike owners are advised to use a good quality lock and where possible lock the frame, wheels and saddles and avoid attaching it in isolated areas.

The Council's Art in Empty Spaces is designed to provide temporary activities in vacant properties

Brave New World

AN INNOVATIVE re-make of Shakespeare's 'The Tempest' is the latest instalment of a Council project designed to transform empty properties.

Production company RETZ has turned 297 Hoxton Street into a usable space called O Brave New World – which is a gallery, library and bar by day, and a theatre by night – with the first run of performances celebrating the play's 400th anniversary.

Over a six-month run the company is focusing on six parts of the tale that aim for a deeper, more interactive exploration of the story.

'The Wrack', which ran last month, saw the building transformed into a bar for shipwrecked sailors. Part two, 'A.R.I.E.L', introduces a tyrant's daughter marooned on an island. The space has become a super-computer serving 'HTML sandwiches' and 'electric cocktails'.

The venture is one of a series of projects supported by the Council's Art in Empty Spaces (AIES) initiative, designed to transform empty spaces into something 'meaningful' for residents.

Felix Mortimer, director of RETZ, found passers-by to be intrigued by the transformation of the property. He said: "From the start we've encouraged this kind of curiosity and interaction through day-to-day encounters as we want people to feel part of the project and part of the stories we tell."

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, added that it was a great of example of how artists use the high street to support the local economy.

In addition to the performances a programme of events including live music sessions are planned.

The very best of DYH 2012

The Arcola in Dalston played host to the closing day of the Council's month-long free arts festival for young people

A DAZZLING event celebrating the best of Discover Young Hackney '12 (DYH) drew the free Council-run, month-long, annual, arts festival to a close.

The Arcola Big Top Tent, in Dalston, played host to the final day of the festival on 25 February, and young people from A New Direction's Headstart programme took charge of all aspects of production and marketing.

Youngsters from both the Turkish-speaking Alevi Cultural Centre, E8, and the Huddleston Centre, E5, which aims to support disabled people and their families to take maximum control of their lives, were among the young people who performed.

A group of 12 to 20-year-olds from the Alevi Cultural Centre took part in a month-long programme, where they worked with an acting coach.

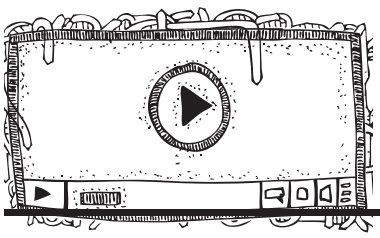

> "The event was a fantastic opportunity for young people to perform at the Arcola and prove there are no limits"

Yashar Ismailoglu, coordinator at the Alevi Centre, said: "This is the first time that we experienced drama and music together as 'musical theatre.' Musicals are very strange for the Turkish/Alevi culture and through DYH we were able to try something new."

Young people from the Huddleston Centre worked with Kimnara Music to form their own band, and develop and showcase their musical talents.

Cassandra Delisser, Huddleston Centre's youth project manager, said: "Disabled young people from the centre showed that there is no limit to ambition when it comes to their music ability."

Other highlights from the closing event included a fashion show – which was the culmination of a four-day fashion design course at Pembury Youth Centre, E5, where youngsters gained skills in researching designs, fabric shopping, pattern cutting and sewing.

Kyra, 14, from City Academy, said: "We learnt how to put a whole dress together; it took a lot of time and I had to focus. It was difficult at first, but it got easier and I am really pleased I kept trying."

A performance by a Vietnamese cultural exchange group, led by Hackney Family Action, was another highlight – and will form part of the borough's celebrations to welcome the Olympic and Paralympic Games in July.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Giving young people opportunities like this is what DYH is all about. The event was a fantastic opportunity for young people to perform at the Arcola and prove there are no limits when it comes to creative talent."

Now in its sixth year, DYH promotes training in the arts for young people through a range of taster sessions and workshops run by creative professionals in music, dance, radio, art, literature, photography, design, fashion, singing, film and theatre.

Renaissance woman

Hackney-born Anna Fiorentini is founder and principal of the Anna Fiorentini Theatre and Film School, which teaches drama, singing, dance, costume and make-up for seven to 18-year-olds

NO – I can't see Anna Fiorentini bashing out 'Total Eclipse of the Heart'. While there is a height similarity with diminutive gravelly-voiced Welsh songstress Bonnie Tyler, Anna's manner seems a world away from the throat-busting power ballad.

But the stage school founder is a woman of a thousand voices, faces and – as it turns out – fancy dresses. "I loved singing 'Total Eclipse of the Heart' with my old band. Plus I'll make any excuse for a fancy dress party. Last year I was Dorothy from 'Wizard Of Oz'; before I'd been Amy Winehouse – that look was scarily similar," she lets slip, laughing.

The Hackney-born actress, singer and businesswoman looks to keep both fun and professionalism throughout the Anna Fiorentini Film and Theatre School (AFFTS) – from the 20-odd staff to the young people she supports.

Based at her old school, Clapton Girls' Academy, it teaches drama, singing, dance, costume and make-up to seven to 18-year-olds. Around 140 young people turn up each week.

"It was set up to give East End children the same opportunities as those usually available to people in the West End or rich families," the Homerton resident says.

Although only open for 11 years, AFFTS has an alumni that include former 'EastEnders' actors as well as the current Simba in the staged production of 'The Lion King'. Michelle Collins, Krishna Guru-Murthy, Barbara Windsor and 'Small Island' star Ashley Walters are all among the school's most vocal champions.

> "I originally trained as an actress, not a businesswoman – if something is not fun, it's probably not worth doing"

Indeed, the annual variety show usually packs out the 1,275-seater Hackney Empire with students performing classic stage scenes. Little surprise the cabarets and corporate shows are well received when the tutors include the trainers behind the likes of Jessie J, Tina Turner and (the real) Amy Winehouse.

"It's so easy to put inner city young people into little boxes. 'Do street dance or another improvisation about gang culture.' But if you want local young people to have opportunities, it is better to concentrate on what others their age elsewhere are doing," she says.

"Give a family on a council estate the chance to have their child work on a drama about gun crime, or with industry professionals preparing for a West End quality show, and nine times out of 10, they will choose the second," she adds.

Her community work interests partly stem from her up-bringing."I grew up on a council estate for 19 years. I didn't have money or grow up with money. So now I try to keep the ethos of accessibility and opportunity while being realistic at the same time," Anna says.

"What I'd really love is for some of the City firms to get on board. We do a lot of fundraising and get grants but we'd ideally like a quarter of our students on scholarships," she adds.

Anna ran a small youth acting club called Kidspace to put herself through drama school in 1995. Realising demand was high, she successfully got business advice and a loan through the Prince's Trust in 2000.

Anna recalls the early days of setting up AFFTS: "I was running around trying to make sure everyone was getting paid and everything was going smoothly. But I realised the school was just new and soon it was really buzzing," she says.

"I learnt a lot in that time, and now I have a great team working with me – we've had great achievements. Besides I originally trained as an actress, not a businesswoman – if something is not fun, it's probably not worth doing," she smiles.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: Is it possible to recycle polystyrene and plastic bags? I am also unsure what to do with metal and plastic bottle caps – can we recycle them too?

A: Unfortunately we're not able to recycle polystyrene at the moment, but there are a few things you can do with plastic bags. Wherever possible you should try to reuse plastic bags as many times as possible, reducing the need for new ones. Some supermarkets even offer rewards to customers using their own bags. There are also carrier bag collection points in some supermarkets for recycling, especially the larger Tesco and Sainsbury's stores. Metal and plastic bottle tops and jar lids can also be recycled but please remove them before adding the bottles and jars to your recycling and put them in separately.

Residents of Linzell Estate spruce up the community forest garden

Green space gets facelift

RESIDENTS of Linzell Estate had their local community green space spruced up as part of the Transform programme, which aims to regenerate areas of neglected land into green areas.

The dedicated team of Hackney Homes staff, Groundwork staff, residents and volunteers from the BSix College, worked for over six months to prepare the area and sow more than 300 forest plants for the community to enjoy.

The project, initiated by the Linzell Tenants Residents Association (TRA), was awarded £12,000 funding from London 2012 Changing Places Transform initiative and Hackney Homes.

TRA Chair Jean Cooper thanked the Tenants Association members and the Council for their support. She said: "Without the Tenant Association members' support, this project would have never happened. We have truly started something special for future generations to enjoy and I hope that the tenants of Linzell Estate get the most out of it."

Resident organiser Helen Wilson added: "On this project we have tried to provide a relaxing, usable area for residents of all ages and a valuable learning and wildlife site. The space is not only a garden, it is a natural forest providing sustainable as well as edible plants such as ferns, herbs, asparagus, artichokes, alliums, strawberry plants and more."

"The end result is fantastic and I hope residents take ownership of it and reap the benefits that this site can provide."

Council marks Climate Change Week

A RANGE of environmentally friendly activities were hosted by the Council to mark national Climate Change Week from 12 to 18 March.

Most of the events were arranged by the Council's Green Liaison Officers (GLOs) who gave advice on how residents and business owners can use less energy, reduce waste and increase the amount they recycle.

An organised walk from Hackney Town Hall to London Fields took place to highlight the need to become less dependent on motorised transport; and a bike specialist offered free bicycle maintenance and advice for residents.

London Fields park user group and Council staff are also set to plant a community orchard using traditional fruit varieties.

Cllr Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Crime, Sustainability and Customer Services, said: "There are lots of simple steps we can take to save energy – which often don't cost anything except our time – such as walking more, not using plastic bags when shopping or increasing recycling at home.

"The Council is at the forefront of sustainable behaviour locally."

Save water to avoid drought bite

WITH average rainfall levels this winter being the lowest since 1972, residents are being asked to save water.

Water companies across southern and eastern England are introducing water restrictions as a result of two unusually dry winters which have left reservoirs and rivers well below normal levels.

Water company Thames Water has announced a hosepipe ban to affect all residents from 5 April.

Residents are encouraged to invest in a water butt

A ban on hosepipes means they cannot be used for 'recreational use', to fill ponds and pools, or to clean outdoor surfaces. People in breach of these terms risk being prosecuted and fined up to £1,000. Watering cans and buckets are still allowed.

A spokesperson from Thames Water said: "Groundwater levels in parts of our region are lower than they were during the 1976 drought – following below average rainfall for 18 of the last 23 months."

The Council is offering residents subsidised water butts which can store up to 200 litres of rainwater, suitable for watering the garden. The water butts are available for £34 – which is a saving of £16 on the recommended retail price.

Thames Water also have a range of free water saving devices including alternative shower heads available to customers to use in their homes.

News in brief

Rare Jubilee tree takes root

A COMMEMORATIVE tree presented to the Council by broadcaster Sir David Attenborough has been planted at Hackney Marshes to mark the Queen's Diamond Jubilee this summer.

The rare Native Black Poplar sapling tree is one of 33 trees – one per London borough – to be planted at a prominent place to provide a link throughout the 620 square miles of the capital.

The sapling was planted along a stretch of the old River Lea, as Black Poplars prefer to have their roots near water. Attending the tree-planting was the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Susan Fajana-Thomas, along with Council Parks Service staff. Cllr Fajana-Thomas said: "We are extremely proud in Hackney to have received this lovely tree to mark the wonderful occasion of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee. Planting it at the Marshes will add to the beauty of the landscape and give local people the opportunity reflect on the long service of our Queen."

Barber of Seville

8 March, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, E8 1EJ

Set in Seville in the 18th century, Rossini's Barber of Seville tells the story of Count Almaviva and his quest to win the beautiful Rosina away from the clutches of her guardian, Dr Bartolo. Assisted by the roguish Figaro, the Count gains access to the doctor's house and wins the heart and eventually hand of Rosina.

The performance by English Touring Opera (ETO) opened with a crisp and precisely articulated rendition of the overture. The work rollicked and frolicked along, carried with aplomb by an outstanding cast, chorus and orchestra. There were numerous occasions when the slick slapstick on stage had the audience roaring. The scene where Figaro made his grand entrance, with an entourage of cross-dressing villagers was hilarious.

The solo and ensemble work of the cast was of the highest order, but special mention should go to Alan Fairs as Don Basilio. Looking like a cross between Bilbo Baggins and Yoda, his bass/baritone voice filled every inch of the Empire.

It's a shame that this was only booked for four performances. A Rossini's masterpiece, it was done full justice by ETO, and has a natural showcase in the Empire. And for those who still believe opera is for the rich, ticket prices started at a reasonable £10.

Handel's Messiah

1 April, 7.30pm

St John of Jerusalem Church, Lauriston Rd, E9 7HJ

A COMMUNITY choir is inviting residents to a free performance of one of Handel's most famous works – Messiah.

St John of Jerusalem Festival Chorus seeks to widen the appeal of choral music and now regularly attracts audiences in excess of 400.

'Hallelujah' is one of the most legendary musical pieces in classical music and the 50-strong chorus will be aiming to get the audience to join in. The Haydn Chamber Orchestra and soloists will also be perform.

Choir member Jamie Elliott said: "A lot of people think classical music is boring and not for them and concerts can often be expensive and out of reach for many. But we are building up a really diverse audience of young and old and people from all sorts of backgrounds. It's amazing how, once they start getting into these big choral pieces, a lot of people get hooked."

The Festival Chorus, which celebrates its 15th birthday this year, has tackled works by composers including Bach, Brahms, Britten, Mozart and Vivaldi.

A supporting role

Teachers and pupils from Queensbridge Primary School prepare for their role as a national support school

QUEENSBRIDGE Primary School has been selected for a role that will see it support schools in struggling circumstances.

The Dalston school, which received top marks from school inspectors Ofsted last year, has been named a 'national support school' by the National College of School Leadership, with Queensbridge headteacher Sarah Bailey being chosen as a 'national leader of education' (NLE).

National support schools and leaders help challenging schools raise their standards. It is reserved for the best schools in the country.

The type of support provided is flexible and can involve an NLE becoming an acting or executive headteacher of the assisted schools.

Sarah – who begins training for the role in April – said Queensbridge cannot wait to get started in the role.

"This comes on the back of a fantastic report from Ofsted so we are delighted. I'd like to thank the entire school community as our achievement and successes are a result of their hard work and commitment," she said.

Toby Salt, National College deputy chief executive, added: "It's great that heads like Sarah Bailey are becoming NLEs, looking beyond their own school gates to help more and more pupils get the best start in life. This scheme is about the best school leaders helping the rest and the results speak for themselves, with benefits for both the schools and academies being supported and those providing the support."

Primary schools supported by NLEs improved their key stage two results by eight per cent over the past two years, while the results of those who had not had this support remained unchanged.

Hackney diver makes a splash with medal hopeful

Pele gets tips from Tom Daley

A 10-YEAR-OLD Hackney diver has fulfilled one of his dreams when he trained with Commonwealth and 2009 World Champion Tom Daley.

Pele Julian won the London Schools Winter Championships last year and was given the chance to dive with – and get some tips from – the London 2012 Team GB gold medal hopeful.

"This has been my dream. Tom was really nice to take time out from his World Cup preparation to chat to me and I loved diving in the same session with him," the Stoke Newington youngster said.

Pele's talent was spotted at Clissold Leisure Centre, which he attended as a keen swimmer and gymnast. He received a bronze Hackney Youth Sports Award in November 2010 and is set to earn a silver at this year's

Encyclopaedia Britannica opens resource to schools

Free access to online learning

ENCYCLOPAEDIA Britannica is offering free access to its primary and secondary school-tailored web content until the summer exam season. The bid comes as the encyclopaedia announced it was stopping its print run.

Borough schools can receive online learning support for coursework and exam preparation across a range of subjects and levels from the extensive reference guide. The school edition is split into three age groups, with each article checked by Britannica editors. Ordinarily, schools pay around £2 per child a year.

Teachers can also receive live training sessions, a support area and learning materials that can be used in classrooms. The service will be free for all schools in Hackney until July 2012.

Book Day event links students through stories

THOUSANDS of Hackney students met top names in children's fiction writing during a pilot literature scheme last month.

The project, named Booklinks, aims to improve literacy in the borough among three to 13-year-olds by building links between publishers, schools and writers.

Seven schools signed up for the pilot, with 2,500 youngsters given the chance to interact with the writers.

Authors, including Geraldine McCaughrean and JD Sharpe, who penned acclaimed horror 'Oliver Twisted', visited borough schools to give readings and speak about their lives as novelists.

In turn, pupils read the books and submitted questions, comments, illustrations and their own stories to the project Booklinks' website.

Booklinks founder, Dylan Calder, said of the event: "It's a way of breaking down barriers between the people who create books and the children who read them. Hopefully, it will help children to see themselves as future writers and storytellers."

The project ran over 27 February to 2 March to coincide with World Book Day. Booklinks was set up by not-for-profit firm Pop Up, which aims to inspire communities through stories.

Teenage pregnancy rates in the borough have dropped considerably during the past decade

Well conceived

TEENAGE pregnancy rates in Hackney and the City have fallen by a third, according to new data from the Office for National Statistics (ONS).

Under-18 conceptions have reduced by 31.6 per cent since 1998 – making the drop among the biggest recorded across England and Wales. The average decrease came in at 14.5 per cent.

The ONS also revealed that Hackney and the City under-16 rates were 39 per cent lower that 2003, compared to the 7.5 per cent average in England and Wales.

When the local NHS teenage pregnancy strategy was launched in 2009, teenage pregnancy was the third highest in the country. The strategy included teacher training, peers speaking to young people about the reality of parenthood, a London-wide condom distribution scheme and developing a teenage health service called CHYPS in the City and Hackney.

Screening to tackle breast cancer

FUNDING worth £1.1million has been earmarked for breast screening services in Hackney and Newham.

The funding will be used to buy breast screening equipment that takes digital images. Unlike the current equipment these can be immediately checked for image quality, reducing the need to call women back if the quality of the x-ray isn't good.

Improving breast screening

The new equipment will be accessible from a fixed site in Hackney, to be announced in due course, rather than mobile vans used at present.

The funding forms a £6million nationwide drive to improve cancer care and screening, according to NHS East London and the City, which runs health services in the borough.

Women are invited to attend a breast screening every three years from ages 50 to 70. The number of women attending breast screening appointments in East London is not as high as other parts in England.

Breast screening saves around 1,400 lives each year in the UK. The risk of cancer rises with age, but screening can help save lives when detected early.

Students show surgical spirit

Hafsa Zadran (l) gets some hands-on experience

STUDENTS from Clapton Girls' Academy tested their surgical skills – minus the patients – during a visit to University College Hospital's Education Centre.

Eighteen health and social care sixth-formers were on a project to see how their classroom lessons relate to real jobs.

The girls spent time with a nurse educator, physiotherapist, clinical psychotherapist and occupational therapist, finding out about the work they do, their career backgrounds, training and progression.

The teenagers also replicated two surgical procedures using the robotic simulation equipment that real surgeons learn on and found out what to do when people choke or lose consciousness.

One student wrote on her feedback form: "I enjoyed the part where we carried out an emergency treatment. I gained more understanding on what to do when a person is unconscious." The 27 February training day was organised by education business partnership Inspire! and funded by investment bank UBS.

Large Supply of Females for New South Wales.—The Refuge of the Destitute, in the Hackney-road, have, it is said, announced that it is their intention to send out a ship to New South Wales, in the ensuing spring, with 500 unmarried women or widows, between the ages of 18 and 30 years, as emigrants to New South Wales. It is intended to place the emigrants in divers situations, and leave them free, and not bound to any employer.

Clockwise from top: the Manor House on Dalston Road, where the Refuge was based between 1849 and 1924; annual report of the Refuge for the year 1867; newspaper cutting from the 1830s, describing the Refuge's plans to help women emigrate to Australia; Ordnance Survey map of 1870, showing the Refuge on Dalston Lane (below)

A second chance

Before local authorities became responsible for the welfare of homeless people, houses such as the Refuge for the Destitute in Hackney looked after those sleeping rough.

Set up in the early 1800s, the aim of the Refuge was to aid men and women – recently released from prison – to provide a place where those 'desirous of acquiring in future an honest subsistence by labour, may be employed until weaned from evil courses'. In more modern terms it provided support and rehabilitation with the aim of stopping re-offending.

Hackney Archives hosts a wealth of material about people's stories from the Refuge.

For example, in early October 1851 Ellen Banett, 17, was dismissed 'without character' from her place as a servant 'for wearing the clothes of her mistress's daughter'. The daughter persuaded her mother not to prosecute, but Ellen ended up without a job or a home. Too afraid to go back to her mother and step-father, she ended up on the streets for a fortnight, before being admitted to the Refuge for the Destitute.

The Refuge also created a set of Minute Books dating from 1812 to 1902, which were the records of the committee that ran the Refuge. These include personal details about the people who asked to be admitted.

Not everyone was allowed in: Caroline Andrews, whose sister Ann had once been at the Refuge, was 'desirous of admission through distress' in February 1818. She was in the workhouse at the time and had been 'on the town 12 months before and has been delivered of a child, which is since dead. Not admitted'.

Those allowed in to the Refuge were expected to work and learn a trade – laundry and needlework for women, and basket making, carpentry and wood-chopping for men.

Discipline was strict: in 1857, Harriet Wheeler was reported for having said that the matron 'came home last night tipsy' (the minutes take care to add 'there not being the slightest ground for such an imputation'.) Harriet claimed she had only said it as a joke, but refused to apologise. She was given two hours to think it over and to either apologise to the matron in front of the other women, or be discharged.

Most people stayed in the Refuge from 18 months to two years. Once they had 'improved', the Refuge would help them find a job or an apprenticeship, while keeping an eye on former occupants.

In July 1848, apprentice Charles Dodson returned to the Refuge claiming his master did not give him enough food. After some investigation, refuge officials ordered the master, Mr Stall, to find a replacement master for Charles by the next week – and the boy was housed at the Refuge until this could be done.

Employment was also sometimes found overseas. The Refuge assisted some of its residents to emigrate to America and South Africa and in the 1830s was involved in sending single women to Australia to start a new life.

In 1849, a funding shortage forced the refuge to close its men's house. The women's accommodation moved from Hackney Road to the Manor House on Dalston Lane, where it continued to help female ex-prisoners until 1924 when it merged with the Elizabeth Fry Refuge in Mare Street.

There are no figures to show how successful the Refuge for the Destitute was in improving people's lives, but in some cases it clearly made a big difference. In July 1848, the committee received a letter from a man named Mansfield, whom they had sent to America. The minutes report that 'he is now settled and doing remarkably well. He wishes to have his brother sent out to him and has sent money for the purpose'. Mr Mansfield was not just able to provide for himself and his brother, he was also in a position to be an employer to a new generation from the Refuge.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of recipes courtesy or Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.
Trainee chef Jamel Nwokoye presents this seasonal special. He said: "It's amazing that the chicken keeps such a great shape through the cooking process and the flavours really work well together."
Visit Waterhouse on Orsman Road to try out the dish and explore some of the other dishes on the menu this month.

Ballotine of chicken wrapped in prosciutto and mozzarella

Serves 2 people

Preparation time
10 mins

Cooking time
25 mins

Ingredients

- 2 boneless chicken breast fillets
- 4 pieces sliced prosciutto
- 200g chopped mozzarella
- Salt, pepper, basil
- String

Method

- Preheat oven to 180°C
- Mix the chopped mozzarella salt, pepper and basil in a bowl
- Cut a slash into the chicken from the thick end to the point, being careful not to slice all the way through
- Fill chicken with the mozzarella mix
- Wrap the chicken with three pieces of prosciutto for each breast
- Lay out some cling film on a flat surface – enough so the chicken can be covered into it at least four times. Place the chicken on the cling film and gently roll into a tight sausage shape. Tie both ends of the cling film to ensure it doesn't unwrap
- Use some string to tie around the cling film three times – once at either end of the breast and once in the middle.
- Bring a pan of water to the boil and blanch the chicken for about 4-5 minutes, until it becomes firm
- Remove the cling film, place it in the oven cook for at least 20 minutes

Waterhouse is a social enterprise that trains local people in the ethos of eco-friendly best practice in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, its profits go back into a regeneration programme for the local area.
Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is now open six days a week.

Proposed parking controls in Rectory Road Station area

THE Council is asking people who live or work in the Rectory Road Station area to have their say about the proposed introduction of parking controls.

Parking services consulted this area in 2008 on the possible introduction of parking controls, but a decision was made not to progress the scheme as there was no overall majority support for controls.

However support was received from certain roads – notably from Jenner Road and Benthal Road. Further requests have been received by the Council and Ward Councillors for the introduction of controls in this area. As a result, the Council is re-consulting this area to find out whether parking controls are now supported. If controls are supported, the Council will re-consult this area again on the design of controls.

Have your say on the proposed changes by completing and sending your questionnaire to: CPZ Team Freepost 14259, Hackney Parking Services, 2 Hillman Street E8 1FB by 29 March 2012.

For more info, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/Rectory-Road-Station-Parking; email: consultparking@hackney.gov.uk or call: 020 8356 8877.

Review of Controlled Parking Zone M (Clissold)

THE Council wants to hear views from business owners and residents living and working in Controlled Parking Zone M (Clissold). Residents are currently being consulted about the design of the parking controls in this area.

The Council has carried out extensive survey work in Zone M and has proposed several changes to the allocation of parking bays so that the controls better reflect the needs of local permit holders and visitors.

Copies of the consultation booklet, questionnaire and a map showing the location of the main design proposals in the CPZ are available to download from: www.hackney.gov.uk/Review-of-CPZ-M. For more, email: consultparking@hackney.gov.uk; call: 020 8356 8877; or write to: Freepost 14259, Hackney Parking Services, 2 Hillman Street, E8 1FB by 2 April 2012.
